Herrible Depravity.

A grocer, who lately lived in the neighborhood of London, meditated the destruction of his wife and children by poison; but by the most singular interposition Providence the diabolical wretch fell a victim to his own snare. To carry this unnatural scheme into effect he purchased a leg of mutton, over which he rubbed a large quantity of arsenic, and sent it to his wife, desiring she should dress the joint for the family dinner, as he could not return till night. The wife, being a frugal woman, did not dress the meat, but dined with the children on bread and cheese, of which she informed the monster, who seemed greatly disappointed. The next lay he said that he must go out early upon some business, and desired that a beefsteak should be first provided for him, but that the family must have the mutton for their dinner, the remainder of which he wished to have cold for his supper. The wife obeyed, when the wretch, having eaten heartily of the steak, asked her in what it was fried, as he thought it had a peculiar taste. The wife, strictly adhering to her economical pursuits, said that instead of butter she had used the fat of the mutton. "Then I am a dead man, for I am poisoned!" In a few hours after he died suffering the most excruciating torture. It is generally understood that the wretch had formed a connection with some loose woman of the town, who had probably suggested this plan of extirpating the family, that she might have the entire property, which was not inconsider-

Whitefield produced great effect upon his hearers on one occasion. by an illustration which appealed to the eye as well as to the ear. "You seem to think salvation an easy matter. O! just as easy for me to eatch that insect passing by me." He made a grasp at a fly, real or imaginary. Then he paused a moment, an a opened his hand-"But I have missed it."

The Value of a Newspaper.

The following is the experience of a mechanic, concerning the benefits of a newspaper:

Ten years ago, I lived in a town in Indiana. On returning home one night, for I am a carpenter by trade, I saw a little girl leave my door, and I asked my wife who she was. She said Mrs. Harris had sent her after their newspaper, which my wife had borrowed. As we sat down to tea, my wife said to me, by my given name: "I wish you would subscribe for the newspaper, it is so much comfort to me when you are away from home."

"I would like to do so," said I, "but you know I owe a payment on the house and lot. It will be all I can do to meet it."

She replied, "If you will take this paper, I will sew for the tailor to pay for it."

I subscribed for the paper; it came in due time to the shop. While resting, one noon, and looking over it, I saw an advertisement of the county commissioners to let a bridge that was to be built. I put in a bid for the bridge, and the job was awarded to me, on which I cleared three hundred dollars, which enabled me to pay for my house and lot easily, and but for the newspaper, I should not have known any-thing about the contract, and could not have met my payment on my house and lot. A mechanic never loses anything by taking a newspaper.

President Smith, of Dartmouth, used to set type in the printing office of Simeon Ide, at Windsor, Vt., and says of it: "It always seemed to me that it was a profitable service. I learned to spell, an attainment which even men of great notorie y do not always make. I learned many things about the newspaper and books, and the matters they treat of, which served as a good preparation for the further studies I at J. T. PH.GRIM ...... Proprietor. length undertook. I am far from being satisfied with my present attainments; but imperfect as they seem to me, I cannot help thinking that I am a little better president for leaving been a printer."
